News of Note

» Fortune Small Business (FSB) magazine has recognized the college's Eugenio Pino and Family Global Entrepreneurship Center as a leader in the areas of cross-campus entrepreneurship and family business. The publication is doing a large spread on university entrepreneurship centers across the United States, calling personnel and asking their opinions about the top centers in certain fields, such as technology, social, non-profit, and family business, for example. Colleen Post (MBA '03, BFA '00), associate director, Pino Center, and adjunct professor in entrepreneurship, management, and international business, was interviewed in early May. The Pino Center and the university were identified by other entrepreneurship centers as experts and leaders in cross-campus entrepreneurship and family business and will be highlighted in the article, slated for publication in June, and available online at <http://money.cnn.com/magazines/fsb/>.
